GET SOCIAL WITH US... AND A PODCAST!

We are on Facebook, Instagram and we also have a weekly podcast! Make sure you find us on your platform of choice to stay up to date on what's happening in and around The Corridor. Tune into the Podcast as I interview local businesses and hometown heroes who are working to make our community an amazing place to live. www.thecorridoroc.com/podcast

FROM SUCCESS TO SIGNIFICANCE

What does it look like to take your business from success to significance? For Episode 3 of The Corridor Podcast I sat down with Josh Buckley, the Chief Marketing Officer for Control Air. They are a huge commercial Mechanical Contracting firm that services major accounts across California. They are headquartered right here in The Corridor, on La Palma Ave between Imperial and Lakeview. What initially drew me to them was a story I heard about a hydroponic farm they built for the community as a way to serve those in need in the area. However, what I learned was even more impressive than I had anticipated. It started with a simple desire of the owners, Stan and Ken Ellis, to give back to the community that had made their company so successful, but it grew into so much more. An outreach program that not only feeds, educates and empowers locals in need, but also reaches beyond borders across the globe to make significant and often lifesaving services available to those in extreme poverty. Listen to episode 3 of the podcast for the full interview.

BEER WITH ME...
CRAFT BEER IN THE CORRIDOR

As I have said in previous issues, we are truly blessed with hops and malts all around. So much so it can be overwhelming at times with how much great beer there is to choose from. So, in this issue I'm sending you to The Bruery Terreux in Anaheim. This brewery is exceptional. Here, you have the opportunity to drink world class beer with just a 10 minute Uber from The Corridor.

Have you ever wanted to try new beer? New styles of beer? Weird beers that you might actually like? Honestly if you have any interest in exploring beer The Bruery Terreux is probably the best place to start. There you will find a selection of easy drinking fruity beers that are delicious even for the most developed palate. They have these brusicle (bru-cycle) things that are unreal. Sour, fruity, sweet, and delicious you can't go wrong with one of their sour beers. And of course, they have a wonderful selection of Belgians, IPAs, and the most eclectic selection of bourbon barrel aged beers available this side of the Mississippi. I am not exaggerating, you have to go! There is no better place to explore beer.

And while we're talking about exploring beers, there are a couple of things that should be said. First, you never know what you like in beer until you try. The amount of times I have been around people saying "I don't like beer" and then I say "try this" and they say "oh that's beer?!?" is remarkable. Beer comes in a wide selection and you just got try some to find out if you too might love it like I do. The Bruery Terreux, for my money, is the best place to expose your pallet to wonderful flavors and good vibes. Second, beer culture is different from most things in life. It's chill! If you know nothing about beer don't fret. People are excited to explain and help you find something you might enjoy. The Bruery Terreux exemplifies this culture. The bartenders may seem intimidating but if you walk up and say "I want to try new beer," just sit back and enjoy the experience because you have arrived at the right place. Until next time.. Cheers! -W

Dr. Juliana Smithton, a trailblazing neurologist, is about to deliver the most important seminar of her medical career – but things are getting weird. The burden of her estranged daughter, the fallout from her troubled marriage, and the pressure of launching a tempestuous wonder drug are causing her to see things... hear things... not the least of which include a mysterious woman in a yellow bikini sitting in the front row of this very audience. Is Dr. Smithton losing her brilliant mind to a world of lies? Or is she actually seeing the whole truth for the very first time? The Other Place is a family drama wrapped in a mystery that delves into the dark underbelly of "having it all."
- The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance - The Attic Theater

A local girl gives him purpose in this broken land. But when Valance returns to finish what he started, the young scholar must make the choice: turn and run or stand and fight... and become The Man Who Shot Liberty Valance.
